

FEDERAL OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH

FOH Services for Law Enforcement

We know that you face unique issues with your law enforcement employees. Because of the intense and often hazardous nature of their jobs, federal law enforcement personnel have distinctive occupational health needs and must adhere to rigorous standards. Federal Occupational Health (FOH) understands these needs and offers a wide range of medical services tailored to the federal law enforcement community. We can help you provide the best solutions for the health, safety, and productivity of your employees who are involved in law enforcement.

What are the benefits?

- Integration of a broad range of health-related services into a single program
- Compliance with Federal and agency-specific regulations
- Simple and flexible service delivery method using the Interagency Agreement (IAA)

“FOH is a single point of services and programs for us that covers the entire nation, offering the whole range of medical exams. Their high standards conform to the most current guidelines.”

Medical Director, U.S. Secret Service (USSS)

“It’s wonderful to have occupational medical consultation available for ‘peace of mind.’ An FOH physician who provides a clinical opinion is indispensable.”

Safety and Environmental Compliance Officer
National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration
(NOAA)

Fast Facts

- FOH serves more than 1.8 million federal employees both at home and abroad
- FOH provides medical surveillance services to over 100 federal agencies.
- FOH has nearly 70 years of experience serving federal employees.

Wellness within your reach.

800.457.9808

www.FOH.hhs.gov

How can the FOH’s services benefit my federal agency?

FOH’s health professionals can assist your agency in accurately assessing the ability of both job applicants and incumbents to safely perform the specific duties of their jobs while ensuring optimal performance and reducing risk of injuries.

Pre-placement or periodic exam results are reviewed by experienced FOH occupational medicine physicians who can reliably determine whether law enforcement personnel or qualified applicants are medically qualified to perform the functional requirements of the job. FOH can also provide expert medical opinions on reasonable accommodation requests, fitness-for-duty, and other return-to-work issues.

What types of services are available for law enforcement?

- 1) Pre-employment medical evaluations
- 2) Pre-employment psychological assessments
- 3) Periodic medical surveillance evaluations
- 4) Medical clearance reviews
- 5) Medical employability reviews
- 6) Job task analysis and medical standard development
- 7) Worksite hazard assessment

What services do FOH law enforcement medical programs include?

Our health professionals and environmental health specialists are available to provide expert consultation and advice on a wide range of topics including medical-legal consultations and identification of specific occupational health hazards—plus strategies to mitigate them.

What other support can FOH provide?

FOH can also collect, analyze, and provide meaningful reports on various medical data customized to help agencies manage their programs more effectively, train physical fitness coordinators at your agency, and provide the required immunizations for blood borne pathogens as well as immunizations and medications for international government travel.

